TENNIS CLUB

"In the Spring a lovelier life changes to a burnished brown in the Spring a school girl's fancy turns to the finest game around."

Miss Mary Young announced that the tennis club for the high school girls will begin work in earnest Monday.

There are fourteen students who have reported. They will be divided into two groups. For much will be leader of one group, and Orelia Thompson of the other.

The girls are anticipating having quite a bit of fun, as well as gaining some knowledge of the game. Tennis is very valuable to them for more than one reason. It is a type game they can carry into their life, a game they can always enjoy. With this fine spring weather, it is any small wonder that youngsters heed the call of God's great outdoors.

large canal from the lake to the ocean along the shortest and most economical route. That canal, which now extends from Port Mayaca on the eastern shore of the lake to the ocean east of St. Louis, is known as the St. Louis canal. Discharging 5,000 cubic feet of water per second, or sufficient to flood an area of one square mile to a depth of about 15 1/2 feet in 24 hours, it was originally designed to serve, in conjunction with the flood waters received by Lake Okechobee and to relieve the Everglades from inundation by such waters. With the accomplishments of that purpose the reclamation of the Everglades is declared to be complete.

Some $68,000,000 have already been expended by various special tax districts or improvement agencies in the reclamation of the Everglades. In the time available here today it will be possible to touch upon those various improvements in only a superficial way.

So far as the United States is concerned, the history of the Everglades begins with February 22, 1899, when the territories then known as East and West Florida were ceded by treaty from the Kingdom of Spain to the United States. Almost immediately our federal government began investigations and surveys of the Everglades area. By Act of Congress approved March, 1945, the entire territories of East and West Florida were admitted to the Union as a single state under the name of Florida. One of the conditions of the act of admission was that the United States retained title to all of the public lands within the newly created state.

The potential possibilities of the Everglades area had long intrigued the interest of our early settlers. One of the first acts of the first legislature of Florida was to instruct its congressional delegates to take up with the federal government the matter of the federal government's dealing the Everglades lands to the state upon condition that the state would undertake their reclamation. Preliminary negotiations had been had between the federal government and Florida's first senator, Mr. Westcott. Various examinations and reports upon the area were made by federal authorities. The gist of them was that, although the land in question could be reclaimed at a total cost of some $60,000,000, there was a definite question as to whether or not their value would justify any such great expenditure. But, the authorities agreed that the land was utterly without value to the United States until then undeveloped state.

The negotiations initiated by the State of Florida with the Federal Government pertaining to the Everglades were largely responsible for the passage by the Federal Congress of what is commonly known as the Swamp and Overflowed Lands Act of 1899, under the provisions of which the Federal Government has from time to time granted to various states in the Union whose swampy and overflowed lands lying within their several borders to which title was originally held by the Federal Government.

A stipulation of the Swamp and Overflowed Lands Act was that the state receiving such lands should use the proceeds derived from them, in money or in kind, in the reclamation of the lands in question. It is, however, interesting to note that the Supreme Court of the United States has passed upon that particular provision of the Act in question and by its decision has declared in practical effect that the stipulation is not a binding one and that the several states may employ the proceeds in question without restriction and as in their judgment may be best. In the instance of Florida more than half of the proceeds derived from such lands has been applied to purposes other than reclamation.

Under the provisions of the Swamp and Overflowed Lands Act there has come to the State of Florida from time to time a total of 20,427,972.85 acres of land among which is included the Everglades.

In order to administer the swamp and overflowed lands which, through being given to the state, actually became the property of the citizens of the state, our Legislature created what is now known as the Board of Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund:—

A board consisting of the Governor of the State and four members of his Cabinet. Those gentlemen are the effect exactly what their name implies: Trustees acting for the people of the State of Florida in the administration of the lands in question.

From time to time the Trustees have sold large areas of the lands thus acquired from the Federal Government, including much of the Everglades, until today in that latter area they hold approximately 1,000,000 acres.

The Trustees have sold such lands in accordance with a provision of a law of this State, have paid 25 percent of the proceeds into our State School Fund and a total of $1,821,887.51 has been received by the school fund from that source to May 1, 1929 (the latest figures have available). Approximately $1,540,000 of these payments to the State School Fund has been derived from the sale of Everglades lands. The balance of the proceeds have been applied to various purposes including, in part, the payment of taxes levied for the improvement of the Everglades.

Other improvements, such as the construction of a substantial portion of our State penal institutions at Balford have been provided for the people of the state with monies derived from lands sold by the Trustees.

One of the popular misconceptions concerning the Everglades is that the State of Florida or its citizens are draining and reclaiming that area. The citizens of counties outside the Everglades area are generally of the opinion that in some way they are paying towards the reclamation of the Everglades. On the contrary, the Everglades to date have been a source of direct profit to the people of other sections of the State. In the

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

To bring out the natural brilliancy of table glassware, give a quick polish to each piece while setting the table. Use a soft substance that won't scratch or leave a film. There is a new type of handkerchief which is ideal for polishing glassware because of its soft but strong texture.

Use needles to pin down the cloth when pressing a pleated skirt. The needles will leave no marks when you remove them.

GOOD POTATO CROP ON CATTLE RANCH

H. S. Johnson of the Dixie Cattle Company in Okechobee raised and shipped 1,667 bushels of Irish potatoes on 12 acres of the ranch land, the Okechobee News says. Dividing 12 acres into 1,667 bushels shows an average yield of 139 bushels to the acre and that is 50 per cent above the average for Florida potato districts. The shipments were made in four car loads, the News says, which indicates that the cars were loaded 400 packages to the car, a smaller number than the 600 crates of beans that are put into cars in this section.
